Aviation: a vital link in times of crisis

When disaster strikes, aviation is a critical lifeline for first responders and relief supplies. We will look at aviation's contribution in the aftermath of the earthquake that struck Southern Turkey and Northern Syria earlier this year.

IATA Diversity and Inclusion Awards

Progress continues to be made on improving gender diversity in the airline industry. We will reveal the latest data from the 25by2025 initiative and honor the 2023 IATA Diversity and Inclusion Award winners.

Sustainability: it's more than emissions

Airlines are committed to achieving net zero carbon emissions by 2050. The industry also recognizes that sustainability goes beyond carbon. We will examine the challenges in three sessions focused on:

- Aiming for a zero waste cabin,
- Addressing non-CO2 impacts of aviation on climate change, and
- Financing the transition to Sustainable Aviation Fuels (SAF).

10:30 – 11:15

Networking Break

Level M4 Foyer

Sponsored by FLYR Labs

11:15 – 12:45

Lessons learned from 2022's operational challenges

2022 saw severe operational challenges in some key hubs—primarily in North America and Europe. We will examine what was learned to enable airlines and infrastructure providers to always have a realistic and common view of capacity available to meet the demands of travelers and shippers.

Data: the next frontier

Data drives business success, but unlocking its potential comes with many challenges. We will examine data's contribution to the bottom line, look at ownership and management of airline data, discuss how to keep data safe from hackers and what to expect next in regulation.

Women in the C-Suite: the Chief Commercial Officer (CCO)

CCOs are driving recovery by turning demand into revenue. We'll engage top CCOs for their view on post-pandemic trends in business / leisure travel, how sustainability fits into commercial offerings, and the potential for airline retailing. We'll also discover what they learned as pioneering women climbing the corporate ladder.
